

Hanadi Chehabeddine

Named “World-Class Peacekeeper” and “Everyday Hero” by the Star Tribune, Hanadi is a certified inclusion consultant, speaker and coach. As a thought partner to leaders in business, education and government, Hanadi gives voice to communities of color and inspires workers from all identities to come together around shared our humanity.

She is a Human Rights Award recipient from the city of Eden Prairie for her efforts in dismantling misconceptions about Islam and building bridges of unity. She has been featured in The Washington Times, The Huffington Post, the Star Tribune, The Minneapolis Institute of Art and Cosmopolitan magazine.

Hanadi is a member of the US State Department speakers visiting embassies around the world and virtually talking about social media and social change, minority empowerment and other topics. In 2017, she gave the TEDx talk entitled “A Lebanese approach to eliminate prejudice against Muslims”.

Hanadi’s training sessions and keynotes have been featured at the National SHRM Diversity and Inclusion Conference, Leadership Diversity Alliance, The Forum on workplace Inclusion, The Multicultural Women’s National, EmERGE Conference, Serious Play, The National Diplomacy Summit and many others. Hanadi has ongoing partnerships with the National Diversity Council, Language and Culture Worldwide, The Brand Lab and Morneau Shepell. Her success attests to her caliber and outspokenness.

Before coming to the United States, Hanadi was an award-winning creative and communication specialist working across different media, including print and television in the Middle East.

Specialist areas

- Leading courageous conversations
- Enhancing authenticity and inclusive behaviors
- Inclusive branding and communication
- Empowering Women and BIPOC
- Unconscious Bias and Conscious Inclusion
- Program design
- Coaching